

Catholics

What does the word mean?

Catholic comes from different languages.

Catholic comes from different languages.

- From Late Latin, catholicus;

Catholic comes from different languages.

- From Late Latin, catholicus;
- From Greek, καθολικός (katholikos)

The meanings are:

- “Universal” from the Latin language.

The meanings are:

- “Universal” from the Latin language.
- “According to the whole,” from Greek.

The meanings are:

- “Universal” from the Latin language.
- “According to the whole,” from Greek.
- “All-embracing” or “of the Roman Catholic faith” in English.

I particularly like the description of the Catholic Church from the Council of Trent in 1566.

- ◉ ... she (the church) is Catholic, that is, universal; and justly is she called Catholic, because, as St. Augustine says, 'she is diffused by the splendor of one faith from the rising to the setting sun.'

I particularly like the description of the Catholic Church from the Council of Trent in 1566.

- Unlike republics of human institution... she is not within the limits of one kingdom, nor confined to the members of any one society, but embraces all within the amplitude of her love...”

To help with the idea of the universal church, who embraces all, I have a video.

Yes, it is a promo for a television series, but many brothers from St. Joseph seminary thought this would show the idea of Catholic fully.